
“Transformers”™ Composer Ram Khatabakhsh Is Beyond Limitations

Posted by Liz Rodriguez / 16 Oct 2017

Composer Ram Khatabakhsh, of Motion Sound Pro and based out of Los Angeles, has just wrapped the score for the new Transformers Autobots Alliance Experience set to be revealed in China later this year, in advance of its Asian and U.S tour.

Ram, who originally hails from Great Britain, scored the music for the new revolutionary exhibit at his Burbank studios in California, ahead of conducting a live 60-piece orchestra, to give audiences the full cinematic and high definition sound as they immerse themselves into the world of the Autobots, and their ongoing battle to protect Earth against the evil Decepticons.

Since making the permanent move to Los Angeles, the young composer has been relentlessly racking up film and TV credits. His latest feature film is the highly anticipated action-horror movie Beyond Skyline starring Frank Grillo, produced by Greg Strause and Matthew Chausse, set for release in December.

Veteran composer Nathan Whitehead composed the original score for the feature, but due to major picture changes, Ram was brought in by director Liam O'Donnell to do additional music, as well as composing the opening and closing title song for the film.

Aside from scoring films, and TV shows, Ram Khatabakhsh has created original music for numerous UK national commercials for high profile consumer brands including Ford and Nestle.

We are excited to see what is coming up next from this young composer!
